Document #3

"And when the Greeks came to the banks of the Scamander River those thousands died
And why?
No man had attacked their high-walled cities
But those whom war took never saw their children
No wife with gentle hand shrouded them for their grave.
They lie in a strange land. And in their homes are sorrows, too
Lonely women who died, old men who waited for sons that never came
That was the glorious victory they won. - Euripides, Greek writer 415 BC
